

DMY INTERNATIONAL DESIGN FESTIVAL Berlin, 01.–05. June 2011

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

With a vast exhibition and numerous events showcasing the latest inventions and current developments in contemporary product design, the DMY International Design Festival 2011 will anew take place from June 1 to 5. Designers, companies and design schools can apply to participate until February 14, 2011.

This year's DMY International Design Festival puts a spotlight on the cultural impact of design with a central exhibition of pioneering products by more than 400 designers, as well as a symposium, a series of open design workshops, an award ceremony and satellite exhibitions. With exhibitors and institutions from more than 30 nations participating, the festival is a truly international event and there's still an opportunity for you to join.

Designers, companies and brands, design schools and institutions are welcome to apply as exhibitors for the next festival edition. The application deadline is Monday, February 14, 2011. Download the application form on <http://dmy-berlin.com>.

Designers, companies, brands and institutions register under the category Exhibitors. Young designers (up to three years after graduation or not older than 30 years old), students and design schools can apply as New Talents/Youngsters. As a subsidized module, the New Talents/Youngsters section supports young talents and enables the presentation of pioneering, research-driven projects.

Berlin-based galleries, design studios, shops, showrooms and museum spaces can apply within the module Extended/Satellite Exhibitions to host self-initiated exhibitions and events that will take place during the festival period and will be communicated within the festival program.

Details on fees, conditions and services are included in the application forms. The application forms, further information on the admission process and festival program are available at: <http://dmy-berlin.com/>

About DMY Berlin

DMY Berlin is an international platform for contemporary product design, founded in 2003 by a network of leading creative thinkers from the Berlin design scene. Annually, DMY presents the DMY International Design Festival in Berlin. As a breeding ground for young designers and a unique business platform for professional designers and companies, the festival has organically grown into a key event for contemporary and conceptual design and is the largest of its kind in Germany.
